Program in Advanced Security Studies (PASS)

The Program in Advanced Security Studies (PASS) is the Marshall Center's flagship resident program. This 12-week course of study for civilian government officials and military officers provides graduate-level education in security policy, defense affairs, international relations and related topics, such as international law and counterterrorism. PASS consists of core studies and electives, which include assigned readings, seminar discussions, panels and role-playing exercises. It also includes a one-week field study that allows participants to see how theoretical knowledge is applied in the political arena.

Program on Terrorism and Security Studies (PTSS)

The Program on Terrorism and Security Studies (PTSS) addresses numerous aspects of a threat that confronts nations around the globe. This five-week course is designed for government officials, police and military officers currently employed in mid- and upperlevel management of counterterrorism organizations throughout the world. The course focuses on methods to help a state effectively combat terrorism but still adhere to the fundamental values of a democratic society. Participants develop a common understanding of the definition of terrorism and establish contacts that help them approach this complex problem in an international environment.

Senior Executive Seminar (SES)

The Senior Executive Seminar (SES) is an intensive eight-day program that offers policymakers a forum for exploring a current international security issue in depth. Participants include general officers, senior diplomats, ambassadors, ministers, deputy ministers and parliamentarians. Each SES focuses on a specific issue and includes formal presentations by senior officials and recognized experts, followed by discussions in seminar groups.

Seminar on Transatlantic Civil Security (STACS)

The Seminar on Transatlantic Civil Security (STACS) provides civil security professionals from Europe, Eurasia and North America an in-depth look at how nations can effectively address domestic security issues that have regional and international impact.

The three-week seminar examines best practices for ensuring civil security and preventing, preparing for and managing the consequences of domestic and regional crises and disasters. STACS is offered for military officers and government officials responsible for civil security policies and programs, as well as representatives of intergovernmental and nongovernmental organizations with civil security responsibilities.

Program for Security, Stability, Transition and Reconstruction (SSTaR)

The Program for Security, Stability, Transition and Reconstruction (SSTaR) addresses both why and when security, stability, transition, and reconstruction operations are required in the global security environment and how a nation can participate productively. This three-week course is for mid-career military and civilian officials (lieutenant colonel, colonel or the civilian equivalent) who are working in a government position that deals with the planning or execution of SSTaR operations. It is designed to enhance the knowledge and skills participants need to be able to advise on their nation's contributions to current and potential multinational SSTaR operations.

Combating Terrorism Language Program (CTLP)

The Combating Terrorism Language Program (CTLP) is a five-week program designed to help CT professionals improve their English language proficiency and build the specialized CT vocabulary needed to take part in either PTSS or PASS. Participants develop practical skills by listening to lectures on combating terrorism, taking notes, presenting briefings, and participating in discussions.

Security Studies Language Program (SSLP)

The Security Studies Language Program (SSLP) is a four-week program that develops the English or German language proficiency and specialized vocabulary that participants need to take part in PASS or PTSS. Initially, SSLP participants strengthen their vocabulary and grammar. Participants then develop practical skills by listening to lectures on defense and security topics, taking notes, presenting briefings, and participating in discussions.
