The ideal PTSS participant is a mid-career military or law enforcement professional, civilian government official, or NGO representative who has a relevant background in counterterrorism or countering violent extremism. Candidates should have a professional interest in international crisis management.

PTSS strives for balanced gender participation and applications from women are strongly encouraged.

The George C. Marshall European Center is an internationally recognized security studies center of excellence that promotes dialogue and understanding among the global community of nations. This reputation rests on an enduring bilateral commitment between the United States and Germany, coupled with the Center's international staff and faculty.

Since the first security studies event took place in 1993, more than 200 resident programs have been held in Garmisch-Partenkirchen with more than 12,000 government and military graduates from more than 152 nations. The Marshall Center connects the right people to create positive change for a more stable world.
